Operation Clambake:
The Fight Against Scientology on the Net

For decades L. Ron Hubbard’s instructions on how to crush any opposition worked well. His loyal cult members destroyed lives and families in their attempts to scare ex-members into silence and ruin critics. The campaign against the Cult of Scientology is an attempt to bring its secrets and crimes to the surface, and justice to its victims.

The Internet has changed everything for critics of Scientology. The time and cost involved in conducting an investigation into cult activities has dramatically decreased. On the internet it is possible to access more detailed information than one can find in any single physical location. Books, court records, and other critical information is readily available to be used to educate an unaware public and potential victims.

L. Ron Hubbard never predicted the Internet, so the cult has no policy that can handle it. Angry ex-members or fearless investigative journalists were no real challenge for an unscrupulous cult with millions of dollars to spend. But the impact of this new communication, of people exchanging documents and experiences, is devastating. All the money in the world can’t stop thousands of critics stirred into action by the information on the internet.

The cult seems to be caught off guard. People worldwide have done everything from hosting a critical link on their homepage, to making the innermost secrets of Scientology available on their web sites. When Scientology sued one critic, ten more appeared. On the internet, the Scientology “tech” to handle “suppressive persons” (SPs) has proven only to harm the cult.

In 1998, the Church of Scientology began issuing its members a CD which contained Netscape Navigator. This CD was given to church adherents under the cover of providing them with internet access software. Those who installed Netscape from this CD did not realize that a censorware program had been incorporated into the installation process. This program gives no indication of its presence, and offers no means of removal. If you are a member of the Church of Scientology and have installed its software, you will not be able to access our web site with your computer.

Who is Xenu?

Would you like to hear a wild story? Are you sitting comfortably?

Right, let’s begin:

Once upon a time (75 million years ago to be more precise) there was an alien galactic ruler named Xenu. Xenu was in charge of all the planets in this part of the galaxy, including our own planet Earth. In those days, Earth was called Teegeeack.

Xenu had a problem. All of the 76 planets he controlled were overpopulated. Each planet had on average 178 billion people. He wanted to get rid of the excess population, so he formulated a plan.

With the help of renegades, Xenu took complete control and defeated the good people and the Loyal Officers. Then, with the help of psychiatrists, he called in billions of people for “income tax inspections,” but they were instead given injections of a paralyzing mixture of alcohol and glycol. Then they were put into space planes that looked exactly like DC8s, except they had rocket motors instead of propellers.
These DC8 space planes flew to planet Earth where the paralyzed people, numbering in the hundreds of billions, were stacked around the bases of volcanoes. When everyone had been piled on Teegeeack, H-bombs were lowered into the volcanoes. Xenu then detonated all the H-bombs and everyone was killed.

The story doesn’t end there though. Since everyone has a soul (called a “thetan” in this story), Xenu had to trick the souls into not coming back. So while the hundreds of billions of souls were being blown around by the nuclear winds, he had special traps that caught the souls in electronic beams — the electronic beams were sticky, like fly-paper.

After he had captured all these souls, he had them packed into boxes and taken to huge cinemas. There the souls had to spend days watching special 3D motion pictures that told them lies about what life should be like, and these films confused them and tricked them into believing things that were not true. They were shown “false” pictures and were told “false” things, including stories about Christianity, Judaism, Islam and other religions. In this story, this process is called “implanting.”

When the films ended and the souls left the cinema, they began to stick together in groups. They had all seen the same film and thought they were the same “person.” They clustered in numbers of a few thousand. There were only a few living bodies left, so they stayed in clusters and inhabited these bodies — our ancestors.

As for Xenu, the Loyal Officers finally overthrew him and locked him away in a mountain on one of the planets. He is kept there by a force-field powered by an eternal battery. Xenu is still alive today.

That is the end of the story. And so today everyone is full of these clusters of souls, called “body thetans.” If each of us is to be a free soul, then we must remove all our body thetans and pay enormous sums of money to do so. And the only reason people believe in God, Christ, Muhammad or Satan is because it was in the film their body thetans saw 75 million years ago.

Well what did you think of that story? What? You thought it was ridiculous? Sort of like Battlefield Earth?

We think so too. This space opera, however, is the core belief of the religion known as Scientology. If its members had known about this story when they first joined, then they would never have gotten involved. It is revealed when you reach one of their secret levels called “OT III.” After that, you are supposed to rid yourself of these body thetans through telepathic communication. You must pay a lot of money to get to this level, or you have to work very hard for the organization for many years, and for extremely low pay.

This leaflet is a warning. If you choose to become involved with Scientology, then we would like you to do so with your eyes open and fully aware of the sort “teaching” you will receive. The story of Xenu is the punchline to a very long and expensive joke.

Most of the Scientologists who work in the Dianetics centers and so-called “Churches” of Scientology do not know about Xenu since they are not given this information until they reach Scientology’s upper levels. It may take them many years to attain this, if they ever do. Those who do know are forced to keep it a secret and do not tell it to neophytes.

Now you know their big secret — for which an individual pays hundreds of thousands of dollars. Don’t let that deter you from joining though.
